

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

HAVING been long employed in the ſtudy and cultivation of the Engliſh language, I lately publiſhed a Dictionary like thoſe compiled by the academies of Italy and France, for the uſe of ſuch as aſpire to exactneſs of criticiſm, or elegance of ſtyle.

But it has been ſince conſidered that works of that kind are by no means neceſſary to the greater number of readers, who, ſeldom intending to write, or preſuming to judge, turn over books, only to amuſe their leiſure, and to gain degrees of knowledge ſuitable to lower characters, or neceſſary to the common buſineſs of life: theſe know not any other uſe of a Dictionary than that of adjuſting orthography, and explaining terms of ſcience or words of infrequent occurrence, or remote derivation.

For theſe purpoſes many Dictionaries have been written by different authors, and with different degrees of ſkill; but none of them have yet fallen into my hands by which even the loweſt expectations could be ſatisfied. Some of their authors wanted induſtry, and others literature: ſome knew not their own defects, and others were too idle to ſupply them.

For this reaſon a ſmall Dictionary appeared yet to be wanting to common readers; and, as I may without arrogance claim to myſelf a longer acquaintance with the lexicography of our language than any other writer has had, I ſhall hope to be conſidered as having more experience at leaſt than moſt of my predeceſſors, and as more likely to accommodate the nation with a vocabulary of daily uſe. I therefore offer to the Public an Abſtract or Epitome of my former work.

In comparing this with other Dictionaries of the ſame kind, it will be found to have ſeveral advantages.

I. It contains many words not to be found in any other.

II. Many barbarous terms and phraſes by which other Dictionaries may vitiate the Style, are rejected from this.

Digitized by Google

III. The words are more correctly ſpelled, partly by attention to their etymology, and partly by obſervation of the practice of the beſt authors.

IV. The etymologies and derivations, whether from foreign languages, or from native roots, are more diligently traced, and more diſtinctly noticed.

V. The ſenſes of each word are more copiouſly enumerated, and more clearly explained.

VI. Many words occurring in the elder authors, ſuch as Spenſer, Shakeſpeare, Milton, which had been hitherto omitted, are here carefully inſerted; ſo that this book may ſerve as a gloſſary or expoſitory index to the poetical writers.

VII. To the words, and to the different ſenſes of each word, are ſubjoined from the large Dictionary the names of thoſe writers by whom they have been uſed; ſo that the reader who knows the different periods of the language, and the time of its authors, may judge of the elegance or prevalence of any word, or meaning of a word; and without recurring to other books, may know what are antiquated, what are unuſual, and what are recommended by the beſt authority.

The words of this Dictionary, as oppoſed to others, are more diligently collected, more accurately ſpelled, more faithfully explained, and more authentically aſcertained. Of an Abſtract it is not neceſſary to ſay more; and I hope it will not be found that truth requires me to ſay leſs.

A

OF THE

ENGLISH TONGUE.

GRAMMAR which is the art of uſing words properly, compriſes four parts: Orthography, Etymology, Syntax, and Proſody.

In this diviſion and order of the parts of grammar I follow the common grammarians, without enquiring whether a fitter diſtribution might not be found. Experience has long ſhewn this method to be ſo diſtinct as to obviate confuſion, and ſo comprehenſive as to prevent any inconvenient omiſſions. I likewiſe uſe the terms already received, and already underſtood, though perhaps others more proper might ſometimes be invented. Sylburgius, and other innovators, whoſe new terms have ſunk their learning into neglect, have left ſufficient warning againſt the trifling ambition of teaching arts in a new language.

ORTHOGRAPHY is the art of combining letters into ſyllables, and ſyllables into words. It therefore teaches previouſly the form and ſound of letters.

The letters of the Engliſh language are.

Roman.	Italick.	Old Engliſh.	Name.
Aa	Aa	𝔄𝔞	a
Bb	Bb	𝔅𝔟	be
Cc	Cc	𝔠	ſee
Dd	Dd	𝔇𝔡	dee
Ee	Ee	𝔢	e
Ff	Ff	𝔣	eff

Jj	Jj	𝔍𝔧	j conſon
Kk	Kk	𝔎𝔨	ka
Ll	Ll	𝔩	el
Mm	Mm	𝔐𝔪	em
Nn	Nn	𝔑𝔫	en
Oo	Oo	𝔬	o

Yy	Yy	𝔜𝔶	wy
Zz	Zz	ℨ𝔷	zed more commonly izzard or uzzard that is ſ hard.

To theſe may be added certain combinations of letters univerſally uſed in printing; as &, ſt, fl, ſl, ſh, ſk, ff, ffl, fi, ffi, fi, ffi, ffl, and &c, or and per ſe, and, &, ſt, ſt, ſt, ſh, ſk, ff, ffl, ſi, ffi, fi, ffi ffl, &c.

Our letters are commonly reckoned twenty-four, becauſe anciently i and j, as well as u and v, were expreſſed by the ſame character; but as thoſe letters, which had always different powers, have now different forms, our alphabet may be properly ſaid to conſiſt of twenty-ſix letters.

None of the ſmall conſonants have a double form, except ſ, s; of which ſ is uſed in the beginning and middle, and s at the end.

Vowels are five; a, e, i, o, u.

Such is the number generally received; but for i it is the practice to write y in the end of words; as thy, holy; before i, as from die, dying; from beautify, beautifying; in the words ſays, days, eyes; and in words derived from the Greek, and written originally with υ; as ſyſtem, συστημα; sympathy, συμπαθια.

For u we often write w after a vowel, to make a diphthong; as raw, grew, view, vow, flowing, lowneſs.

The ſounds of all the letters are various.

In treating on the letters, I ſhall not, like ſome other grammarians enquire into the original of their form as an antiquarian; nor into their formation and prolation by the organs of ſpeech, as a mechanick, anatomiſt, or phyſiologiſt; nor into the properties and gradation of ſounds or the elegance or harſhneſs of particular combinations, as a writer of univerſal and tranſcendental grammar. I conſider the English alphabet only as it is Engliſh; and even in this narrow diſquiſition I follow the example of former grammarians, perhaps with more reverence than judgment, becauſe by writing in Engliſh I ſuppoſe my reader already acquainted with the Engliſh language, and conſequently able to pronounce the letters of which I teach the pronunciation; and becauſe of ſounds in general it may be obſerved, that words are unable to deſcribe them. An account therefore of the primitive and ſimple letters is uſeleſs almoſt alike to thoſe who know their ſound, and to thoſe who know it not.

Of VOWELS.

A.

A has three ſounds, the ſlender, open, and broad.

A ſlender is found in moſt words, as face, name; and in words ending in ation, as, creation, ſalvation, generation.

The a ſlender is the proper Engliſh a, called very juſtly by Erpinius, in his Arabick Grammar, a Anglicum cum e miſtum, as having a middle ſound between the open a and the e. The French have a ſimilar ſound in the word, pais, and in their e maſculine.

A open is the a of the Italian, or nearly reſembles it; as, father, rather, congratulate, fancy, glaſs.

A broad reſembles the a of the German; as all, wall, call.

Many words pronounced with a broad were anciently written with au, as fault, mault; and we ſtill ſay fault, vault. This was probably the Saxon ſound, for it is yet retained in the northern dialects, and in the ruſtick pronunciation; as maun, for man, baund, for band.

The ſhort a approaches to the a open, as groſs.

The long a, if prolonged by e at the end of the word, is always ſlender, as grave, fame.

A forms a diphthong only with i or y, and u or w. Ai or ay, as in plain, vain, gay, clay, has only the ſound of the long and ſlender a, and differs not in the pronunciation from plane, wane.

Au or aw has the ſound of the German a, as raw, naughty.

Ae is ſometimes found in Latin words not completely naturaliſed or aſſimilated, but is no Engliſh diphthong; and is more properly expreſſed by ſingle e, as Ceſar, Eneas.

E.

E is the letter which occurs moſt frequently in the Engliſh language.

E is long, as in ſcene; or ſhort, as in cellar, ſeparate, celebrate, men, then.

It is always ſhort before a double conſonant, or two conſonants, as in vein, perplexity, relent, meddler, reptile, ſerpent, cellar, ceſſation, bleſſing, fell, felling, debt.

E is always mute at the end of a word, except in monoſyllables that have no other vowel, as the; or proper names, as Penelope, Phebe, Derbe; being uſed to modify the foregoing conſonant, as face, once, hedge, oblige, or to lengthen the preceding vowel, as Kin, bone; can cane; pin, pine; tun, tune; rob, robe; pop, pope fir, fire; cur, cure; tub, tube.

Almoſt all words which now terminate in conſonants ended anciently in e, as year, yeare wildneſs, wildneſſe, which e probably had the force of the French e feminine, and conſtituted a ſyllable with its aſſociate conſonant; for in old editions, words are ſometimes divided thus clear-ve, fol-lo, knowled-ge. This e was perhaps for a time vocal or ſilent in poetry as convenience required; but has been long wholly mute. Camden in his Remains calls it the ſilent e.

It does not always lengthen the foregoing vowel, as glove, love, give.

It has ſometimes in the end of words a ſound obſcure, and ſcarcely perceptible, as open, ſhipmen, ſhottun, thiſtle, participle, metre, lucre.

This faintneſs of ſound is found when e ſeparates a mute from a liquid, as in rottun, or follows a mute and liquid, as in cattle.

E forms a diphthong with a, as near; with i as deign, receive; and with u or w, as new, ſtew.

Ea ſounds like e long, as mean; or like ee, as dear, clear, near.

Ei is ſounded like e long, as ſeine, perceiving.

Eu ſounds as u long and ſoft.

E, u, w, are combined in beauty and its derivatives, but have only the ſound of u.

E may be ſaid to form a diphthong by reduplication, as agree, ſleeping.

Eo is found in yeoman, where it is ſounded as e ſhort; and in people, where it is pronounced like ee.

I

I has a ſound long as fine; and ſhort as fin.

That is eminently obſervable in i, which may be likewiſe remarked in other letters, that the ſhort ſound is not the long ſound contracted but a ſound wholly different.

The long ſound in monoſyllables is always marked by the e final, as thin, thine.

I is often ſounded before r, as a ſhort u; as, firſt, firſt, ſhirt.

It forms a diphthong only with e, as field, ſhield, which is ſounded as the double ee; except friend, which is ſounded as frend.

I is joined with eu in lieu, and ew in view; which triphthongs are ſounded as the open u.

O.

O is long, as bone, obedient, corroding; or ſhort as block, knock, oblique, till.

Women is pronounced wimen.

The ſhort o has ſometimes the ſound of a cloſe u, as ſon, come.

O coaleſces into a diphthong with a, as moan, groan, approach; oa has the ſound of o long.

O is united to e in ſome words derived from Greek, as economy; but e being not an Engliſh diphthong, they are better written as they are ſounded, with only e, economy.

With i as oil, ſoil, moil, noiſome.

This coalition of letters ſeems to unite the ſounds of the two letters as far as two ſounds can be united without being deſtroyed, and therefore approaches more nearly than any combination in our tongue to the notion of a diphthong.

With a, as boat, boat, coalor; oo has the ſound the Italian u.

With o or w as, our, power, flower: but in ſome words has only the ſound of o long, as in soul, bowl, sow, grow. Theſe different ſounds are uſed to diſtinguiſh different ſignifications; as a w an inſtrument for ſhooting; bow a depreſſion of the head; sow, the ſhe of a boar; sow, to ſcatter ſeed; bowl, an orbicular body; bowl, a wooden veſſel.

Ou is ſometimes pronounced like o ſoft, as court; ſometimes like o ſhort, as cough; ſometimes like u cloſe, as could; or u open, as, rough, tough, which uſe only can teach.

Ou is frequently uſed in the laſt ſyllable of words which in Latin end in or, and are made English, as honour, labour, favour, from honor, labor, favor.

Some late innovators have ejected the u, without conſidering that the laſt ſyllable gives the ſound neither of or nor ur, but a ſound between them, if not compounded of both; beſides that they are probably derived to us from the French nouns in eur, as honeur, faveur.

U.

U is long in ūſe, confūſion; or ſhort, as ŭs, confŭſion.

It coaleſces with a, e, i, o; but has rather in theſe combinations the force of the w conſonant, as quaff, queſt, quit, quite, languiſh; ſometimes in ui the i loſes its ſound, as in juice. It is ſometimes mute before a, e, i, y, as guard, guest, guiſe, buy.

U is followed by e in virtue, but the e has no ſound.

Us is ſometimes mute at the end of a word, in imitation of the French, as prorogue, ſynagogue, plague, vague, harangue.

Y.

Y is a vowel, which, as Quintilian obſerves of one of the Roman letters, we might want without inconvenience, but that we have it. It ſupplies the place of i at the end of words, as thy; before an i, as dying; and is commonly retained in derivative words where it was part of a diphthong in the primitive; as deſtroy, deſtroyer; betray, betrayal, betrayer; pray, prayer; ſay, ſayer; day, days.

Y being the Saxon vowel ẏ, which was commonly uſed where i is now put, occurs very frequently in all old books.

General Rules.

A vowel in the beginning or middle ſyllable before two conſonants is commonly ſhort, as opportunity.

In monoſyllables a ſingle vowel before a ſingle conſonant is ſhort, as, flag, frog.

Many is pronounced as if it were written many.

Of Conſonants.

B.

B has one unvaried ſound, ſuch as it obtains in other languages.

It is mute in debt, liſt er, comb, doubt, lamb, limb, dumb, thumb, climb, comb, womb.

It is uſed before l, and r, as black, brown.

C.

C has before e and i the ſound of s; as ſincerely, centrick, century, circular, ciſtern, city, ſiccity; before a, o, and u, it ſounds like k, as calm, concavity, copper, incorporate, curioſity, concupiſcence.

C might be omitted in the language without loſs, ſince one of its ſounds might be ſupplied by s, and the other by k, but that it preſerves to the eye the etymology of words, as face from facies, captive from captivus.

Ch has a ſound which is analyſed in tſh, as, church, chin, crutch. It is the ſame ſound which the Italians give to the c ſimple before i and e as citta, cerro.

Ch is ſounded like k in words derived from the Greek, as chymiſt, ſcheme, choler. Arch is commonly ſounded ark before a vowel, as archangel, and with the Engliſh ſound of ch before a conſonant, as archbiſhop.

Ch, in ſome French words not yet aſſimilated, ſound like ſh, as machine, chaiſe.

C, according to Engliſh orthography, never ends a word; therefore we write stick, black, which were originally sticke, blacke. In ſuch words C is now mute.

It is uſed before l and r, as clock, croſs.

Is uniform in its ſound, as death, diligent.

It is uſed before r, as drawn, droſs; and w as dwell.

F.

F, though, having a name beginning with a vowel, it is numbered by the grammarians among the ſemivowels, yet has this quality of a mute, that it is commodiouſly ſounded before a liquid as flaſh, fly, freckle. It has an unvariable ſound, except that of is ſometimes ſpoken nearly as ov.

G.

G has two ſounds, one hard, as in ga, go, gun; the other ſoft, as in gem, giant.

At the end of a word it is always hard, as ring, ſung, ſong, frog.

Before e and i the ſound is uncertain.

G before e is ſoft, as, gem, generation, except in gear, geld, geeſe, get, gewgaw, and derivatives from words ending in g, as, ſinging, ſtronger, and generally before er at the ends of words, as ſinger.

G is mute before n, as gnaſh, ſign, foreign.

G before i is hard, as give, except in giant, gigantick, gibbet, gibe, giblets, giles, gild, gilliflower, gin, ginger, jingle, to which may be added Egypt and gypſy.

Gh in the beginning of a word has the ſound of the hard g, as ghaſtly; in the middle, and ſometimes at the end, it is quite ſilent as though, right, ſought, ſpoken tho', rite, ſaute.

It has often at the end, the ſound of f, as laugh; whence laughter retains the ſame ſound in the middle; cough, trough, ſough, tough, enough, ſlough.

Digitized by Google

It is not to be doubted, but that in the original pronunciation gh has the force of a conſonant deeply guttural, which is ſtill continued among the Scotch.

G is uſed before b, l, and r.

H.

H is a note of aſpiration, and ſhows that the following vowel muſt be pronounced with a ſtrong emiſſion of the breath, as hat, horſe.

It ſeldom begins any but the firſt ſyllable, in which it is always ſounded with a full breath, except in heir, herb, holſter, honour, humble, honeſt, humour, and their derivatives.

It ſometimes begins middle or final ſyllables in words compounded, as blockhead: or derived from the Latin, as comprehended.

J.

J conſonant ſounds uniformly like the ſoft g and is therefore a letter uſeleſs, except in etymology, as ejaculation, jeſter, jocund, juice.

K.

K has the ſound of hard c, and is uſed before e and i, where according to Engliſh analogy, c would be ſoft, as kept, king, ſkirts, ſkeptick, for ſo it would be written, not sceptick, becauſe sc, is ſounded like s, as in scene.

It is uſed before n, as knell, knot, but totally loſes its ſound in modern pronunciation.

K is never double; but c is uſed before it to ſhorten the vowel by a double conſonant, as cockle, pickle.

L.

L has in the Engliſh the ſame liquid ſound as in other languages.

The cuſtom is to double the l at the end of monoſyllables, as hill, will, full. Theſe words were originally written hille, wille, fulle; and when the e firſt grew ſilent, and was afterwards omitted, the ll was retained, to give force, according to the analogy of our language, to the foregoing vowel.

L is ſometimes mute, as in calf, half, halves, calves, could, would, ſhould, pſalm, talk, ſalmon, falcon.

The Saxons, who delighted in guttural ſounds ſometimes aſpirated the l at the beginning of words, as hlaf, a loaf, or bread; hlaford, a lord; but this pronunciation is now diffuſed.

Le at the end of words is pronounced like a weak el, in which the e is almoſt mute, as table, ſhuttle.

M.

M has always the ſame ſound, as murmur, monumental.

N.

N has always the ſame ſound, as noble, manners.

N is ſometimes mute after m, as damn, condemn, hymn.

P.

P has always the ſame ſound, which the Welſh and Germans confound with B.

P is ſometimes mute, as in pſalm, and between m and t, as tempt.

Ph is uſed for f in words derived from the Greek, as philoſopher, philanthropy, Philip.

Q.

Q, as in other languages, is always followed by u, and has a ſound which our Saxon anceſtors well expreſſed by cp, cw, as quadrant, queen, equeſtrian, quilt, enquiry, quire, quotidian. Qu is never followed by u.

Qu is ſometimes ſounded, in words derived from the French, like k, as conquer, liquor, rtſqu chequer.

R.

R has the ſame rough, ſnarling ſound as in other tongues.

The Saxons uſed often to put b before it, as before l at the beginning of words.

Rh is uſed in words derived from the Greek as myrrh, myrrhine, catarrhous, rheum, rheumatick, rhyme.

Re, at the end of ſome words derived from the Latin or French, is pronounced like a weak er, as theatre, ſepulchre.

S.

S has a hiſſing ſound, as ſibilation, ſiſter.

A ſingle s ſeldom ends a word, except the third perſon of verbs, as loves, grows; and the plurals of nouns, as trees, buſhes, diſtreſſes; the pronouns this, his, ours; yours, his; the adverb thus; and words derived from Latin, as rebus, ſurplus, the cloſe being always either in ſe, as houſe, horſe, or in ſi, as graſs, dreſs, bliſs, leſs, anciently graſſe, dreſſe.

S ſingle, at the end of words, has a groſſer ſound, like that of z, as trees, eyes, except this, thus, us, rebus, ſurplus.

It ſounds like z before ion, if a vowel goes before, as intruſion; and like ſ, if it follows a conſonant, as converſion.

It ſounds like z before e mute, as refuſe, and before y final, as roſy; and in thoſe words, boſom, deſire, wiſdom, priſon, priſoner, préſent, preſent, damſel, caſement.

It is the peculiar quality of ſ, that it may be ſounded before all conſonants, except z and x in which ſ is comprized, x being only ks, and z, a hard and groſs ſ. This ſ is therefore termed by grammarians ſuæ potentatis litera; the reaſon of which the learned Dr. Clarke erroneouſly ſuppoſed to be, that in ſome words it might be doubled at pleaſure. This we find in ſeveral languages: σβεννυμι, ſcatter, ſdegno, ſdrucciolo, ſfavellare, σφυζω, ſgombrare, ſgranare, ſhake, ſhumber, ſmell, ſmipe, ſpace, ſplendour, ſpring, ſqueeze, ſcrew, ſtep, ſtrength, ſtroman, ſventura, ſwell.

S is mute in iſle, iſland, demeſne, viſcount.

T.

T has its cuſtomary ſound, as take, temptation.

Ti before a vowel has the ſound of ſi as ſalvation, except an ſ goes before, as queſtion, excepting likewiſe derivatives from words ending in ty, as mighty, mightier.

Th has two ſounds; the one ſoft, as thus, whether; the other hard, as thing, think. The ſound is ſoft in theſe words, then, thence, and there, with their derivatives and compounds; and in that, theſe, thou, thee, thy, thine, their, they, these, them, though, thus; and in all words between two vowels as father, whether; and between r and a vowel, as burthen.

In other words it is hard, as thick, thunder, think, faithful. Where it is softened at the end of a word, an e silent must be added; as breath, breathe, cloth, clothe.

V.

V has a sound of near affinity to that of f, from which it only differs by a diatrical point.

Before f in the Islandick alphabet, v is only distinguished by a diatrical point.

W.

Of W which in dipthongs is often an undoubted vowel, some grammarians have doubted whether it ever be a consonant; and not rather as it is called a double u or ou, as water may be resolved into ouater; but letters of the same sound are always reckoned consonants in other alphabets; and it may be observed, that w follows a vowel without any hiatus or difficulty of utterance, as frosty winter.

Wh has a sound accounted peculiar to the English which the Saxon better expressed by hw: as what, whence, whiting; in whore, only and sometimes in wholesome, wh is sounded like a simple h.

X.

X begins no English word; it has the sound of cs, as axle, extraneous.

Y.

Y, when it follows a consonant, is a vowel; when it precedes either vowel or diphthong, is a consonant, as ye, young. It is thought by some to be as all cases a vowel. But it may be observed of y as of w, that it follows a vowel without any hiatus, as rosy youth.

The chief argument by which w and y appear to be always vowels is, that the sounds which they are supposed to have as consonants, cannot be uttered after a vowel, like that of all other consonants; thus we say, tu, ut; do, odd, but in owd, draw, the two sounds of w have no resemblance to each other.

Z.

Z begins no word originally English; it has the sound, as its name izzard or shard expresses, of s uttered with closer compression of the palate by the tongue, as freeze, froze.

In orthography I have supposed orthoepy, or just utterance of words, to be included; orthography being only the art of expressing certain sounds by proper characters. I have therefore observed in what words any of the letters are mute.

Most of the writers of English grammar have given long tables of words pronounced otherwise than they are written, and seem not sufficiently to have considered, that of the English as of all living tongues there is a double pronunciation, one cursory and colloquial, the other regular and solemn. The cursory pronunciation is always vague and uncertain, being made different in different mouths by negligence, unskilfulness, or affectation. The solemn pronunciation, though by no means immutable and permanent, is yet always less remote from the orthography, and less liable to capricious innovation. They have however generally formed their tables according to the cursory speech of those with whom they happened to converse; and concluding that the whole nation combines to vitiate language in one manner, have often established the jargon of the lowest of the people as the model of speech.

For pronunciation the best general rule is, to consider those as the most elegant speakers, who deviate least from the written words.

There have been many schemes offered for the emendation amd settlement of our orthography, which like that of other nations, being formed by chance, or according to the fancy of the earliest writers in rude ages, was at first very various and uncertain, and is yet sufficiently irregular. Of these reformers some have endeavoured to accommodate orthography better to the pronunciation, without considering that this is to measure by a shadow, to take that for a model or standard which is changing while they apply it. Others, less absurdly indeed, but with equal unlikelihood of success, have endeavoured to proportion the number of letters to that of sounds, that every sound may have its own character, and every character a single sound. Such would be the orthography of a new language to be formed by a synod of grammarians upon principles of science. But who can hope to prevail on nations to change their practice, and make all their old books useless? or what advantage would a new orthography procure equivalent to the confusion and perplexity of such an alteration.

Some of these schemes I shall however exhibit, which may be used according to the diversities of genius, as a guide to reformers or terrour to innovators.

One of the first who proposed a scheme of regular orthography was Sir Thomas Smith, secretary of state to Queen Elizabeth, a man of real learning, and much practised in grammatical disquisitions. Had he written the following lines according to his scheme, they would have appeared thus:

At length Erasmus, that great injur'd name,
The glory of the priesthood, and the shame,
Stemm'd the wild torrent of a barb'rous age,
And drove those holy Vandals off the stage.

At lengθ Eraſmus, θat great injurd nâm,
Ae glori of θe prieſthud, and θe shâm,
Stemmd θe wild torrent of a barb'rous aje,
And drove θös höli Vandals öff θe ſtaje.

After him another mode of writing was offered by Dr. Gill, the celebrated master of St. Paul's school in London; which I cannot represent exactly for want of types, but will approach as nearly as I can, by means of characters now in use, so as to make it understood, ex-

, bibiting two ſtanzas of Spenſer in the reformed orthography.

Spenſer, book iii. canto 5.

Unthankful wretch, ſaid he, is this the meed,

Dr. Gill was followed by Charles Butler, a man who did not want an underſtanding which might have qualified him for better employment. He ſeems to have been more ſanguine than his predeceſſors, for he printed his book according to his own ſcheme: which the following ſpecimen will make eaſily underſtood.

In the time of Charles I. there was a ver prevalent inclination to change the orthography as appears, among other books in ſuch edition of the works of Milton as were publiſhed by himſelf. Of theſe reformers every man had hi own ſcheme; but they agreed in one general deſign of accommodating the letters to the pronunciation, by ejecting ſuch as they thought ſuperfluous. Some of them would have written theſe lines thus:

——All the erth
Shall than be paradis, far happier plac
Than this of Eden, and far happier da

Biſhop Wilkins afterwards, in his great work of the philoſophical language, propoſed, without expecting to be followed, a regular orthography; by which the Lord's prayer is to be written thus;

Yur Fádher hæiſih art in héven, halloed bi dhyi nām, dhyi cingdym cym, dhyi will bi dyn in erth as it is in heven, &c.

We have ſince had no general reformers; but ſome ingenious men have endeavoured to deſerve well of their country, by writing hono and labor for honour and labour, and red for read in the preter-tenſe, ſais for ſays, repete for repeat, explane for explain, or declame for declaim. Of theſe it may be ſaid, that as they have done no good they have done little harm; both becauſe they have innovated little, and becauſe few have followed them

The Engliſh language has properly no dialects; the ſtyle of writers has no profeſſed diverſity in the uſe of words or of their flexions and terminations, nor different but by different degrees of ſkill or care. The oral diction is uniform in no ſpacious country, but has leſs variation in England than in moſt other nations of equal extent. The language of the northern counties retains many words now out of uſe, but which are commonly of the genuine Teutonick race, and is uttered with a pronunciation which now ſeems harſh and rough, but was properly uſed by our ancestors. The northern speech is therefore no barbarous but obsolete. The speech in the western provinces seems to differ from the general diction rather by a depraved pronunciation, than by any real difference which letters would express.

ETYMOLOGY.

ETYMOLOGY teaches the deduction of one word from another, and the various modifications by which the sense of the same word is diversified; as, horse, horses; I love, I loved.

Of the ARTICLE.

The English have two articles, an or a and the.

AN, A.

A has an indefinite signification, and means any, with some reference to more; as This is a fruit, that is, one among the books that are good. He was killed by a sword, that is, some sword. This is a better book for a man than a boy, that is, for any of those that are men than any one of those that are boys. An army might enter without resistance, that is any army.

In the senses in which we use a or an in the singular, we speak in the plural without an article: as, these are good books.

I have made an the original article because it is only the Saxon an, or æn, one, applied to a new use, as the German ein, and the French un; the n being cut off before a consonant in the speed of utterance.

Grammarians of the last age direct, that an should be used before h; whence it appears that the English anciently aspirated less. An is still used before the silent h, as an herb, an honest man. but otherwise a: as,

A horse, a horse, my kingdom for a horse.

Shakespeare.

An or a can only be joined with a singular, the correspondent plural is the noun without an article, as I want a pen; I want pens: or with the pronominal adjective some, as I want some pens.

THE has a particular and definite signification.

The FRUIT

Of that forbidden tree, whose mortal taste
Brought death into the world.

Milton.

That is, that particular fruit, and this world in which we live. So, He giveth fodder for the cattle, and green herbs for the use of man; that is for those beasts that are cattle, and his use that is man.

The is used in both numbers.

I am as free as Nature first made man,
Ere the base laws of servitude began,
When wild in woods the noble savage ran.

Dryden.

Many words are used without articles; as,

1. Proper names, as John, Alexander, Longinus, Aristarchus, Jerusalem, Athens, Rome, London. God is used as a proper name.

2. Abstract names, as blackness, witchcraft, wine, vice, beauty, ugliness, love, hatred, anger, patience, kindness.

3. Words in which nothing but the mere being of any thing is implied: This is not beer, but water: This is not brass, but steel.

Of NOUNS SUBSTANTIVES.

The relations of English nouns to words going before or following are not expressed by cases, or changes of termination, but as in most of the other European languages by prepositions, unless we may be said to have a genitive case.

Singular.

Nom.	Magister,	a Master, the Master.
Gen.	Magistri,	of a Master, of the Master, of Masters, the Masters.
Dat.	Magistro,	to a Master, to the Master.
Acc.	Magistrum,	a Master, the Master.
Voc.	Magister,	Master, O Master.
Abl.	Magistro,	from a Master, from the Master.

Plural.

Nom.	Magistri,	Masters, the Masters.
Gen.	Magistrorum,	of Masters, of the Masters.
Dat.	Magistris,	to Masters, to the Masters.
Acc.	Magistros,	Masters, the Masters.
Voc.	Magistri,	Masters, O Masters.
Abl.	Magistris,	from Masters, from the Masters.

Our nouns are therefore only declined thus: Master, Gen. Masters. Plur. Masters. Scholar, Gen. Scholars. Plur. Scholars.

These genitives are always written with a mark of elision, master's, scholar's, according to an opinion long received, that the 's is a contraction of his, as the soldier's valour, for the soldier his valour: but this cannot be the true original, because 's is put to female nouns, Women's beauty; the Virgin's delicacy; Haughty Juno's unrelenting hate: and collective nouns, as, Women's passions; the rabble's insolence; the multitude's folly; in all these cases it is apparent that his cannot be understood. We say likewise the foundation's strength, the diamond's lustre, the winter's severity; but in these cases his may be understood, he and his having formerly been applied to neuters in the place now supplied by it and its.

The learned, the sagacious Wallis, to whom every English grammarian owes a tribute of reverence, calls this modification of the noun an adjective possessive; I think with no more propriety than he might have applied the same to the genitive in equitum decus, Trojæ ortu, or any other Latin genitive. Dr. Lowth, on the other part, supposes the possessive pronouns mine and thine to be genitive cases.

This termination of the noun seems to constitute a real genitive indicating possession. It is derived to us from those who declined ꝑmiꝺ, a smith; Gen. ꝑmiꝺeꝛ, of a smith; Plur. ꝑmiꝺeꝛ, or ꝑmiꝺaꝛ, smiths; and so in two other of their seven declensions.

It is a farther confirmation of this opinion that in the old poets both the genitive and plural were longer by a syllable than the original word; knitis, for knight's, in Chaucer; leavis, for leaves, in Spenser.

When a word ends in s, the genitive may be the same with the nominative, as Venus temple.

The plural is formed by adding s, as table, tables; flie, flies; sister, sisters: wood, woods; or es where s could not otherwise be sounded, as after ch, s, sh, x, z; after e sounded like s, and g like j; the mute e is vocal before s, as lance, lances; outrage, outrages.

The formation of the plural and adjective singular is the same.

A few words yet make the plural in n, as men, women, oxen, swine, and more anciently eyen and shoon. This formation is that which generally prevails in the Teutonick dialects.

Words that end in f commonly form their plural by ves, as leaf, leaves; calf, calves.

Except a few, muff, muffs; chief, chiefs. So beef, roof, proof, relief, mischief, puff, cuff, dwarf, handkerchief, grief.

Irregular plurals are teeth from tooth, lice from louse, mice from mouse, geese, from goose, feet from foot, dice from die, pence from penny, brethren from brother, children from child.

Plurals ending in s have no genitives: but we say, Women's excellencies, and Weigh the mens wits against the ladies hairs.

Dr. Wallis thinks the Lord's house may be said for the house of Lords, but such phrases are not now in use; and surely an English ear rebels against them. They would commonly produce a troublesome ambiguity, as the Lord's house may be the house of Lords, or the house of a Lord. Besides that the mark of elision is improper, for in the Lord's house nothing is cut off.

Some English substantives, like those of many other languages, change their termination as they express different sexes; as prince, princess; actor, actress; lion, lioness; hero, heroine. To those mentioned by Dr. Lowth may be added arbitress, poetress, chaunteress, dutchess, tigress, governess, tutress, peeress, authoress, traytress, and perhaps others. Of these variable terminations we have only a sufficient number to make us feel our want, for when we say of a woman that she is a philosopher, an astronomer, a builder, a weaver, a dancer, we perceive an impropriety in the termination which we cannot avoid; but we can say that she is an architect, a botanist, a student, because these terminations have not annexed to them the notion of sex. In words which the necessities of life are often requiring, the sex is distinguished not by different terminations but by different names, as a bull, a cow, a horse, a mare; equus, equa; a cock, a hen; and sometimes by pronouns prefixed, as a he-goat, a she-goat.

Of Adjectives.

Adjectives in the English language are wholly indeclinable; having neither case, gender, nor number, and being added to substantives in all relations without any change; as, a good, woman, good women, of a good woman; a good man, good men, of good men.

The Comparison of Adjectives.

The comparative degree of adjectives is formed by adding er, the superlative by adding est to the positive; as, fair, fairer, fairest; love, lovelier, loveliest; sweet, sweeter, sweetest; low, lower, lowest, high, higher, highest.

Some words are irregularly compared; good, better, best; bad, worse, worst; little, less, least; near, nearer, next; much, more, most; many (for moe), more (for more), most, (for most); late, later, latest, or last.

Some comparatives form a superlative by adding most, as nether, nethermost; outer, outermost; under, undermost; up, upper, uppermost; fore, former, foremost.

Most is sometimes added to a substantive, as topmast, southmost.

Many adjectives do not admit of comparison by terminations, and are only compared by more and most, as benevolent, more benevolent, most benevolent.

All adjectives may be compared by more and most, even when they have comparatives and superlatives regularly formed; as fair, fairer, or more fair, fairest, or most fair.

In adjectives that admit a regular comparison the comparative more is oftener used than the superlative most as more fair is oftener written for fairer, than most fair for fairest.

The comparison of adjectives is very uncertain; and being much regulated by commodiousness of utterance, or agreeableness of sound is not easily reduced to rules.

Monosyllables are commonly compared.

Polysyllables or words of more than two syllables, are seldom compared otherwise than by more and most, as deplorable, more deplorable, most deplorable.

Dissyllables are seldom compared if they terminate in some, as fulsome, toilsome; in ful, as careful, spleenful, dreadful; in ing, as trifling, charming; in ous, as porous; in less, as careless, harmless; in ed, as wretched; in id, as candid; in al, as mortal; in ent, as recent, fervent; in ain, as certain; in ive, as missive; in dy, as woody; in fy, as puffy; in ky, as rocky, except lucky; in my, as roomy; in ny, as skinny; in py, as ropy, except happy; in ry, as hoary.

Some comparatives and superlatives are yet found in good writers formed without regard to the foregoing rules; but in a language subjected so little and so lately to grammar, such anomalies must frequently occur.

So shady is compared by Milton.

She in shadiest covert hid,
Tun'd her nocturnal note. Parad. Lost.

And virtuous.

What she wills to say or do,
Seems wisest, virtuousest, discreetest, best.
Parad. Lost.

So trifling by Ray, who is indeed of no great authority.

It is not so decorous, in respect of God, that he should immediately do all the meanest and triflingest things himself, without making use of inferior or subordinate minister. Rejon Gram.

Famous, by Milton.

I shall be named among the famousest
Of women, sung at solemn festivals. Agonistes.

Inventive by Ascham.

Their have the inventivest heads for all purpose, and roundest tongues in all matters.
Ascham Schoolmaster.

Mortal, by Bacon.

The mortalest poisons practised by the West Indians, have some mixture of the blood, fat, or flesh of man. Bacon.

Natural, by Wotton.

I will now deliver a few of the propereſt and naturallest considerations that belong to this place. Wotton's Architecture.

Wretched by Jonson.

The wretchedest are the contemners of all helps; such as presuming on their own naturals, deride diligence, and mock at terms when they understand not things. Ben Jonson.

Powerful, by Milton.

We have sustain'd one day in doubtful fight
What heav'n great king hath pow'rfullest to send Against us from about his throne. Par. Lost.

The termination in ish may be accounted in some sort a degree of comparison, by which the signification is diminished below the positive, as black, blackish, or tending to blackness; salt, salish, or having a little taste of salt: they therefore admit no comparison. This termination is seldom added but to words expressing sensible qualities, nor often to words of above one syllable, and is scarcely used in the solemn or sublime style.

Of Pronouns.

Pronouns, in the English language, are, I, thou, he, with their plurals, we, ye, they; it, who, which, what, whether, whosoever, whatsoever, my, mine, our, ours, thy, thine, your, yours, his, her hers, their, theirs, this, that, other, another, the same, some.

The pronouns personal are irregularly inflected.

	Singular.	Plural.
Nom.	I	We
Accuſ. and other oblique cases.	Me	Us
Nom.	Thou	You
Oblique.	Thee	You

You is commonly used in modern writers for ye, particularly in the language of ceremony, where the second person plural is used for the second person singular, You are my friend.

Nom.	It	They	Applied to
Oblique.	Its	Them	neuters or things.

For it the practice of ancient writers was to use he, and for its, his.

The possessive pronouns like other adjectives, are without cases or change of termination.

The possessive of the first person is my, mine, our, ours; of the second, thy, thine, your, yours, of the third, from he, his, from she, her, and hers, and in the plural their, theirs, for both sexes.

Ours, yours, hers, theirs, are used when the substantive preceding is separated by a verb, as, These are our books. These books are ours. Your children exceed ours in stature, but ours surpass yours in learning.

Ours, yours, hers, theirs, notwithstanding their seeming plural termination, are applied equally to singular and plural substantives, as This book is ours. These books are ours.

Mine and thine were formerly used before a vowel, as mine amiable lady: which though now disused in prose, might be still properly continued in poetry: they are used as ours, and yours, when they are referred to a substantive preceding, as thy house is larger than mine but my garden is more spacious than thine.

Their and theirs are the possessive likewise of they, when they is the plural of it, and are therefore applied to things.

Pronouns relative are, who, which, what, whether, whosoever, whatsoever.

Who is now used in relation to persons, and which in relation to things; but they were anciently confounded. At least it was common to say, the man which, though I remember no example of, the thing who.

Whose is rather the poetical than the regular genitive of which.

The fruit
Of that forbidden tree, whose mortal taste
Brought death into the world. Milton.

Whether is only used in the nominative and accusative cases; and has no plural, being applied only to one of a number commonly to one of two; as Whether of these is left I know not. Whether shall I choose? It is now almost obsolete.

What, whether relative or interrogative, is without variation.

Whosoever, whatsoever, being compounded of who or what, and soever, follow the rule of their primitives.

	Singular	Plural
In all Cases.	This	These
	That	Those
	Other	Others
	Whether

The plural others is not used but when it is preferred to a substantive preceding, as I have sent other horses. I have not sent the same horses but others.

Another, being only an other, has no plural.

Here, there, and where, joined with certain particles, have a relative and pronominal use. Hereof, herein, hereby, hereafter, herewith, thereof, therein, thereby, thereupon, therewith, whereof, wherein, whereby, whereupon, wherewith, which signify, of this, in this, &c. of that, in that, &c. of which, in which, &c.

Therefore, and wherefore, which are properly there for and where for, for that, for which, are now reckoned conjunctions, and continued in use. The rest seem to be passing by degrees into neglect, though proper, useful, and analogous. They are referred both to singular and plural antecedents.

There are two more words used only in conjunction with pronouns, own and self.

Own is added to possessives, both singular and plural, as my own hand, our own house. It is emphatical, and implies a silent contrariety or opposition; as, I live in my own house, that is, not in an hired house. This I did with my own hand, that is, without help, or not by proxy.

Self is added to possessive, as myself, yourselves; and sometimes to personal pronouns, as himself, itself, themselves. It then, like own, expresses emphasis and opposition, as I did this myself, that is, not another; or it forms a reciprocal pronoun, as We hurt ourselves by vain rage.

Himself, itself, themselves, is supposed by Wallis to be put by corruption, for his self, it self, their selves; so that self is always a substantive. This seems justly observed, for we say, He came himself; Himself shall do this; where himself cannot be an acculative.

Of the VERB.

English verbs are active, as I love; or neuter, as I languish. The neuters are formed like the active.

Most verbs signifying action; may likewise signify condition or habit, and become neuters as I love, I am in love; I strike, I am now striking.

Verbs have only two tenses inflected in their terminations, the present; and the simple preterite; the other tenses are compounded of the auxiliary verbs have, shall, will, let, may, can, and the infinitive of the active or neuter verb.

The passive voice is formed by joining the participle preterite to the substantive verb, as I am loved.

To have. Indicative Mood.

Present Tense.

Sing. I have, thou hast, he hath or has
Plur. We have, ye have, they have.

Has is a termination corrupted from hath, but now more frequently used both in verse and prose.

Simple Preterite.

Sing. I had, thou hadst, he had;
Plur. We had, ye had, they had.

Compound Preterite.

Sing. I have had, thou hast had, he has or hath had;
Plur. We have had, ye have had, they have had.

Preterpluperfect.

Sing. I had had, thou hadst had, he had had;
Plur. We had had, ye had had, they had had.

Future.

Sing. I shall have, thou shalt have, he shall have Plur. We shall have, ye shall have, they shall have

Second future.

Sing. I will have, thou wilt have, he will have Plur. We will have, ye will have, they will have

By reading these future tenses may be observed the variations of shall and will.

Imperative Mood.

Sing. Have or have thou, let him have;
Plur. Let us have, have or have ye, let them have Conjunctive Mood.

Present.

Sing. I have, thou have, he have;
Plur. We have, ye have, they have.

Preterite simple as in the Indicative.

Preterite compound.

Sing. I have had, thou have had, he have had;
Plur. We have had, ye have had, they have had

Future.

Sing. I shall have, as in the Indicative.

Second Future.

Sing. I shall have had, thou shalt have had, he shall have had.
Plur. We shall have had, ye shall have had, they shall have had.

Potential.

The potential form of speaking is expressed by may, can, in the present; and might, could, or should, in the preterite, joined with the infinitive mood of the verb.

Present.

Sing. I may have, thou mayst have, he may have.

Plur. We may have, ye may have, they may have.

Preterite.

Sing. I might have, thou mightſt have, he might have;
Plur. We might have, ye might have, they might have.

Preſent.

Sing. I can have, thou canſt have, he can have;
Plur. We can have, ye can have, they can have.

Preterite.

Sing. I could have, thou couldeſt have, he could have;
Plur. We could have, ye could have, they could have.

In like manner ſhould is united to the verb.

There is likewiſe a double Preterite.

Sing. I ſhould have had, thou ſhouldſt have had, he ſhould have had;
Plur. We ſhould have had, ye ſhould have had, they ſhould have had.

In like manner we uſe, I might have had; could have had &c.

Infinitive Mood.

Preſent. To have.
Preterite. To have had.
Participle preſent. Having.
Participle Preterite. Had.

Verb active. To love.

Indicative. Preſent.

Sing. I love, thou loveſt, he loveth or loves;
Plur. We love, ye love, they love.

Preterite ſimple.

Sing. I loved, thou lovedſt, he loved;
Plur. We loved, ye loved, they loved.
Preterperfect compared. I have loved, &c.
Preterpluperfect. I had loved, &c.
Future. I ſhall love, &c. I will love, &c.

Imperative.

Sing. Love or love thou, let him love;
Plur. Let us love, love or love ye, let them love.

Conjunctive. Preſent.

Sing. I love, thou love, he love;
Plur. We love, ye love, they love.
Preterite ſimple, as in the Indicative.
Preterite compound, I have loved, &c.
Future. I ſhall love, &c.
Second Future. I ſhall have loved, &c.

Potential.

Preſent. I may or can love, &c.
Preterite, I might, could, or ſhould have loved, &c.
Double future. I might, could, or ſhould have loved, &c.

Infinitive.

Preſent. To love.
Preterite. To have loved.
Participle preſent. Loving.
Participle paſt. Loved.

The paſſive is formed by the addition of the participle preterite, to the different tenſes of the verb to be, which muſt therefore be here exhibited.

Indicative. Preſent.

Sing. I am, thou art, he is;
Plur. We are or be, ye are or be, they are or be.

The plural be is now very little in uſe.

Preterite.

Sing. I was, thou waſt or wert, he was;
Plur. We were, ye were, they were.

Wert is properly of the conjunctive mood, and ought not to be uſed in the indicative.

Preterite compound. I have been, &c.
Preterpluperfect. I had been, &c.
Future. I ſhall or will be, &c.

Imperative.

Sing. Be thou: let him be;
Plur. Let us be; be ye; let them be.

Conjunctive. Preſent.

Sing. I be, thou beeſt, he be;
Plur. We be, ye be, they be.

Preterite.

Sing. I were, thou wert, he were;
Plur. We were, ye were, they were.
Preterite compound. I have been, &c.
Future. I ſhall have been, &c.

Potential.

I may or can; would, could, or ſhould be; could, would, or ſhould have been, &c.

Infinitive.

Preſent. To be.
Preterite. To have been.
Participle preſent. Being.
Participle preterite. Having been.

Paſſive Voice. Indicative Mood.

I am loved, &c. I was loved, &c. I have been loved, &c.

Conjunctive Mood.

If I be loved, &c. If I were loved, &c. If I ſhall have been loved, &c.

Potential Mood,

I may or can be loved, &c. I might, could, or ſhould be loved, &c. I might, could, or ſhould have been loved, &c.

Infinitive.

Preſent. To be loved.

Preterite. To have been loved.
Participle. Loved.

There is another form of Engliſh verbs in which the infinitive mood is joined to the verb do in its various inflexions, which are therefore to be learned in this place.

To do.

Indicative. Preſent.
Sing. I do, thou doſt, he doth;
Plur. We did, ye do, they do.

Preterite.
Sing. I did, thou didſt, he did;
Plur. We did, ye did, they did.
Preterite, &c. I have done, &c. I had done, &c.
Future. I ſhall or will do, &c.

Imperative.
Sing. Do thou, let him do;
Plur. Let us do, do ye, let them do.

Conjunctive. Preſent.
Sing. I do, thou do, he do.
Plur. We do, ye do, they do.

The reſt are as in the Indicative.
Infinitive. To do; to have done.
Participle preſent. Doing.
Participle preter. Done.

Do is ſometimes uſed ſuperfluouſly, as I do love, I did love; ſimply for I love, or I loved; but this is conſidered as a vitious mode of ſpeech.

It is ſometimes uſed emphatically: as,
I do love thee, and when I love thee not,
Chaos is come again. Shakeſpeare.

It is frequently joined with a negative; as, I like her, but I do not love her; I wiſhed him ſucceſs, but did not help him. This, by cuſtom at leaſt, appears more eaſy than the other form of expreſſing the ſame ſenſe by a negative adverb after the verb, I like her, but love her not.

The imperative prohibitory is ſeldom applied in the ſecond perſon, at leaſt in proſe, without the word do; as, Stop him, but do not hurt him; Praiſe beauty, but do not dote on it.

Its chief uſe is in interrogative forms of ſpeech, in which it is uſed through all the perſons; as, Do I live? Doſt thou ſtrike me? Do they rebel? Did I complain? Didſt thou love her? Did ſhe die? So likewiſe in negative interrogations; Do I not yet grieve? Did ſhe not die?

Do and did are thus uſed only for the preſent and ſimple preterite.

There is another manner of conjugating neuter verbs, which, when it is uſed, may not improperly denominate them neuter paſſives, as they are inflected according to the paſſive form by the help of the verb ſubſtantive to be. They anſwer nearly to the reciprocal verbs in French; as,

I am riſen, ſurrexi, Latin; Je me ſuis levé; French.

I was walked out, exieram; Je m'étois promené;

In like manner we commonly expreſs the preſent tenſe; as, I am going, eo. I am grieved, doleo. She is dying, illa moritur. The tempeſt is raging, furit procella. I am purſuing an enemy, hoſtem inſequor. So the other tenſes, as, We were walking, περιπατουμεν ημεν eramus, I have been walking, I had been walking, ſhall or will be walking.

There is another manner of uſing the active participle, which gives it a paſſive ſignification; as, The grammar is now printing grammatica jam nunc chartis imprimitur. The braſs is forging, æra excuduntur. This is, in my opinion, a vitious expreſſion, probably corrupted from the phraſe more pure, but now ſomewhat obſolete, The book is a printing, The braſs is a forging, being properly at, and printing and forging verbal nouns ſignifying action, according to the analogy of this language.

The indicative and conjunctive moods are in modern writers frequently confounded, or rather the conjunctive is wholly neglected, when for convenience of verſification does not invite its revival. It is uſed among the purer writers after if, though, ere, before, whether, except, unleſs, whatſoever, whomſoever, and words of wiſhing; as, Doubtleſs thou art our father, though Abraham be ignorant of us, and Iſrael acknowledge us not.

Of IRREGULAR VERBS.

The Engliſh verbs were divided by Ben Jonſon into four conjugations, without any reaſon ariſing from the nature of the language, which has properly but one conjugation, ſuch as has been exemplified; from which all deviations are to be conſidered as anomalies, which are indeed in our monoſyllables, Saxon verbs and the verbs derived from them, very frequent: but almoſt all the verbs which have been adopted from other languages, follow the regular form.

Our verbs are obſerved by Dr. Willis to be irregular only in the formation of the preterite and its participle. Indeed in the ſcantineſs of our conjugations there is ſcarcely any other place for irregularity.

The firſt irregularity, is a ſlight deviation from the regular form, by rapid utterance or poetical contraction; the laſt ſyllable ed is often joined with the former by ſuppreſſion of e; as lov'd for loved; after c, ch, ſ, f, k, x, and after the conſonants s, th, when more ſtrongly pronounced, and ſometimes after m, n, r, if preceded by a ſhort vowel, t is uſed in pronunciation, but very ſeldom in writing, rather than d; as plac't, ſnatch't, fiſh't, walk't, dwel't, ſwell, ſoft, plac'd, snatch'd, fiſh'd, wak'd, dwel'd, ſmel'd; or placed, snatched, fiſhed, waked, dwelled, ſmelled.

Thoſe words which terminate in l, or ll, or p, make their preterite in t, even in ſolemn language; as crept, felt, dwelt; ſometimes after x, ed is changed into t; as vext: this is not conſtant.

A long vowel is often changed into a ſhort one; thus kept, ſlept, wept, crept, ſwept; from the verbs, to keep, to ſleep, to weep, to creep, to ſweep.

Where d or t go before, the additional letters do not alter this contracted form, coaleſce into one ſound with the radical d or t; if t were the radical, they coaleſce into t; but if d were the radical, then into d or t, as the one or the other ſound may be more eaſily pronounced; as, read, led, greed, ſhed, ſhred, bid, hid, chid, fed, bleed, ſped, ſtrid, ſlid, rid; from the verbs, to read, to lead, to ſpread, to ſhed, to ſhred, to bid, to hide, to chide, to feed, to bleed, to breed, to ſpeed, to ſtride, to ſlide, to ride. And thus, cut, hurt, caſt, burſt, eat, beat, ſweat, ſit, quit, ſmit, writ, bit, bit, met, ſhot; from the verbs, to cut, to hurt, to caſt, to burſt, to eat, to beat, to ſweat, to ſit, to quit, to ſmite, to write, to bite, to bit, to meet, to ſhoot. And in like manner, lent, ſent, rent, girt; from the verbs, to lend, to ſend, to rend, to gird.

The participle preterite or paſſive is often formed in en inſtead of ed; as, been, taken, ſeen, ſtolen, known, from the verbs, to be, to take, to ſee, to ſteal, to know.

Many words have two or more participles, as bit only, written, bitten, eaten, beaten, bidden, ridden, ſhaven, choſen, broken; but likewiſe writ, bit, eat, beat, bid, chid, ſhot, choſe, broke, are promiſcuouſly uſed in the participle, from the verbs to write, to bite, to eat, to beat, to bide, to ride, to ſhoot, to chooſe, to break, and many ſuch like.

In the ſame manner ſworn, ſhewn, blown, mown, loaden, laden, as well as. ſow'd, ſhow'd, blow'd, mow'd, loaded, laded, from the verbs to ſwear, to ſhew, to blow, to mow, to load, or lade.

Concerning theſe double participles it is difficult to give any rule; but he ſhall ſeldom err who remembers, that when a verb has a participle diſtinct from its preterite, as write, wrote, written, that diſtinct participle is more proper and elegant, as The book is written, is better than The book is wrote. Wrote however may be uſed in poetry; at leaſt, if we allow any authority to poets, who, in the exultation of genius, think themſelves intitled to trample on grammar.

There are other anomalies in the preterite.

1. Win, ſpin, begin, ſwim, ſtrike, ſtick, ſing, ding, ſpring, ring, wring, ſpring, ſwing, drink, ſink, ſhrink, ſtink, come, run, find, bind, grind, wind, both in the preterite imperfect and participle paſſive, give, know, ſpun, begun, ſwum, ſtruck, ſtuck, ſung, ſtung, ſlung, rung, wrung, ſprung, rung, drunk, ſunk, ſhrunk, ſtunk, come, run, found, bound, ground, wound. And moſt of them are alſo formed in the preterite by a, as began, ran, ſang, ſprang, drank, came, ran, and ſome others; but moſt of theſe are now obſolete. Some in the participle paſſive likewiſe take en, as ſtricken, ſtrucken, drunken, bounden.

2. Fight, teach, reach, ſeek, beſeech, catch, buy, bring, think, work, make, fought, taught, raught, ſought, beſought, caught, bought, brought, thought, wrought.

But a great many of theſe retain likewiſe the regular form, as teached, reached, beſeeched, ſeeked, worked.

3. Take, ſake, forſake, wake, awake, ſtand, break, ſpeak, bear, ſhear, ſwear, tear, weave, cleave, ſtrive, thrive, drive, ſhine, riſe, ariſe, ſmite, write, bide, abide, ride, cloſe, chuſe, tread, get, beget, forget, ſeethe, make in both preterite and participle took, forſook, woke, awoke, ſtood, broke, ſpoke, bore, ſhore, ſwore, tore, wore, wove, clove, ſtrove, threw, drove, ſhone, roſe, aroſe, ſmote, wrote, bade, abode, rode, chuſe, trode, got, begot, forgot, ſod. But we ſay likewiſe, thrive, riſe, ſmit, writ, abid, rid. In the preterite ſome are likewiſe formed by a, as, brake, ſpake, bare, ſhare, ſware, tare, ware, clave, gat, begat, forgat, and perhaps ſome others, but more rarely. In the participle paſſive are many of them formed by en; as, taken, ſhaken, forſaken, broken, ſpoken, born, ſhorn, ſworn, torn, worn, woven, cloven, thriven, driven, riſen, ſmitten, ridden, choſen, trodden, gotten, begotten, forgotten, ſodden. And many do likewiſe retain the analogy in both, as waked, awaked, ſheared, weaved, leaved, abided, ſeethed.

4. Give, bid, ſit, make in the preterite, gave, bade, ſate; in the participle paſſive given, bidden, ſitten; but in both bid.

5. Draw, know, grow, throw, blow, crow like a cock, fly, ſlay, ſee, ly, make their preterite drew, knew, grew, threw, blew, crew, flew, ſlew, ſaw, lay; their participles paſſive by n, drawn, known, grown, thrown, blown, flown, ſlain, ſeen, lien, lain. Yet from flee is made fled; from go, went, from the old wend, the participle is gone.

Of Derivation.

That the Engliſh language may be more eaſily underſtood, it is neceſſary to enquire how its derivative words are deduced from their primitives and how the primitives are borrowed from other languages. In this enquiry I ſhall ſometimes copy Dr. Wallis, and ſometimes endeavour to ſupply his defects, and rectify his errors.

Nouns are derived from verbs.

The thing implied in the verbs as done or produced, is commonly either the preſent of the verb; as, to love, love; to fright, a fright; to fight, a fight; or the preterite of the verb, as, to ſtrike, I ſtrick or ſtrook, a ſtroke.

The action is the ſame with the participle preſent, as loving, frighting, fighting, ſtriking.

The agent, or perſon acting, is denoted by the ſyllable er added to the verb, as lover, frighter, ſtriker.

Subſtantives, adjectives, and ſometimes other parts of ſpeech, are changed into verbs: in which caſe the vowel is often lengthened, or the conſonant ſoftened; as, a houſe, to houſe; braſs, to braze; glaſs to glaze; graſs, to graze; price to prize; breath, to breathe; a fiſh, to fiſh; oyl, to oyl; further, to further; forward; to forward; hinder, to hinder.

Sometimes the termination en is added, eſpecially to adjectives; as, haſte, to haſten; length, to lengthen; ſtrength, to ſtrengthen; ſhort, to ſhorten; faſt, to faſten; white, to whiten; black, to blacken; hard, to harden; soft, to soften.

From substantives are formed adjectives of plenty, by adding the termination y; as, a louse, lousy; wealth, wealthy; health, healthy; might, mighty; worth, worthy; wit, witty; lust, lusty; water, watery; earth, earthy; wood, a wood, woody; air, airy; a heart hearty; a hand, handy.

From substantives are formed adjectives of plenty, by adding the termination ful denoting abundance; as, joy, joyful; fruit fruitful; youth, youthful; care, careful; use, useful; delight, delightful; plenty plentiful; help, helpful.

Sometimes in almost the same sense, but with some kind of diminution thereof, the termination some is added, denoting something, or in some degree; as delight, delightsome; game, gamesome; irk, irksome; burden, burdensome; trouble, troublesome; light, lightsome; hand, handsome; alone, lonesome; toil, toilsome.

On the contrary, the termination less added to substantives, makes adjectives signifying want; as, worthless, witless, heartless, joyless, careless, helpless. Thus comfort, comfortless; sap, sapless.

Privation or contrariety is very often denoted by the particle un prefixed to many adjectives, or in before the words derived from the Latin; as pleasant, unpleasant; wise unwise; profitable, unprofitable; patient, impatient. Thus unworthy, unhealthy, unfruitful, unuseful, and many more.

The original English privative is un; but as we often borrow from the Latin, or its descendants, words already signifying privation, as inefficacious, impious, indiscreet, the inseparable particles un and in have fallen into confusion from which it is not easy to disentangle them.

Un is prefixed to all words originally English, as, untrue, untruth, unaught, unhandsome.

Un is prefixed to all participles made privative adjectives, as unfeeling, unassisting, unaided, undelighted, unendeared.

Un ought never to be prefixed to a participle present to mark a forbearance of action, as unsighing, but a privation of habit, as unpitying.

Un is prefixed to most substantives which have an English termination, as unfertileness, unperfectness, which if they have borrowed terminations, take in or im, as infertility, imperfection; incivil, incivility; inactive, inactivity.

In borrowing adjectives, if we receive them already compounded, it is usual to retain the participle prefixed, as indecent, inelegant, improper; but if we borrow the adjective, and add the privative particle, we commonly prefix un, as unpolite, ungallant.

The prepositive particles dis and mis derived from the des and mes of the French signify almost the same as un; yet dis rather imports contrariety than privation, since it answers the Latin preposition de. Mis insinuates error, and for the most part may be rendered by the Latin words male or perperam. To like to dislike; honour, dishonour; to honour, to grace to dishonour, to disgrace; to deign, to disdain; chance, hap, mischance, mishap; to take, to mistake; deed, misdeed; to use, to misuse; to employ to misemploy; to apply, to misapply.

Words derived from Latin written with di or dis retain the same signification; as distinguish, distinguo; detract, detraho; defame defamo; detain, detineo.

The termination ly added to substantives, sometimes to adjectives, forms adjectives that import some kind of similitude or agreement being formed by contraction of like or like.

A giant, giantly, giantlike; earth, earthly; heaven, heavenly; world, worldly; God, godly; good goodly.

The same termination ly, added to adjectives forms adverbs of like signification; as beautiful beautifully; sweet, sweetly; that is, in a beautiful manner; with some degree of sweetness. The termination ish added to adjectives, imports diminution; and added to substantives imports similitude or tendency to a character; as, green greenish; white, whitish; soft, softish; a thief thievish; a wolf, wolvish; a child, childish.

We have forms of diminutives in substantives though not frequent; as, a hill, a hillock; a cock a cockrel; a pike, pickrel; this is a French termination: a goose, a gosling; this is a German termination: a lamb, a lambkin; a chick, chicken; a man, a manikin; a pipe, a pipkin and thus Halkin, whence the patronymick Hawkins, Wilkin, Thomkin, and others.

Yet still there is another form of diminution among the English, by lessening the sound itself especially of vowels; as there is a form of augmenting them by enlarging, or even lengthening it; and that sometimes not so much by change of the letters, as of their pronunciation as, sup, sip, soop, sop, sippet, where, besides the extenuation of the vowel, there is added the French termination et; top, tip; spit, spout; babe, baby, bawm; great pronounced long especially if with a stronger sound, great, little pronounced long lit-tle; ting, tong, tang, imports a succession of smaller and then greater sounds; and so in jingle, jangle, tingle, tangle, and many other made words.

Much however of this is arbitrary and fanciful, depending wholly on oral utterance, and therefore scarcely worthy the notice of Wallis.

Of concrete adjectives are made abstract substantives, by adding the termination ness; and a few in hood or head, noting character or qualities: as, white, whiteness; hard, hardness; great, greatness; skilful, skilfulness, unskilfulness; godhead, manhood, maidenhood, widowhood, knighthood, priesthood, likelihood, falsehood.

Digitized by Google

There are other abstracts, partly derived from adjectives, and partly from verbs, which are formed by the addition of the termination, th, a small change being sometimes made; as long, length; strong, strength; broad, breadth; wide, width; deep, depth; true, truth; warm, warmth; dear, dearth; flow, flowth: merry, mirth; heal, health; well, weal, wealth; dry, drought; young, youth; and so moon, moneth.

Like these are some words derived from verbs; die, death; till; tilth; grow, growth; mow, later mow'th, after mow'th; commonly mowth and written later math, after math; steal, stealth; bear, birth; rue, ruth; and probably earth from to ear or plow; fly, flight; weigh, weight; fray, fright; draw, draught.

These should rather be written flighth, frighth, only that custom will not suffer h to be twice repeated.

The same form retains faith, spight, wreathe, wrath, breath, breath, breadth, south, worth, light, wight, and the like, whose primitives are either entirely obsolete, or seldom occur. Perhaps they are derived from fey or foy, spry, wry, weak, brew, new, fry, bray, say, work.

Some ending in ship, imply an office, employment, or condition; as, kingship, wardship, guardianship, partnership, stewardship, headship, lordship.

Thus worship, that is worthship; whence worshipful, and to worship.

Some few ending in dom, rick, wick, do especially denote dominion, at least state or condition; as kingdom, dukedom, earldom, princedom, popedom, christendom, freedom, wisdom, wheredom, bishoprick, bailiwick.

Hood and age are plainly French terminations, and are of the same import with us as among them, scarcely ever occurring, except in words derived from the French, as commandment, usage.

There are in English often long trains of words allied by their meaning and derivation; as, to beat, a beat, a batoon, a battle, a beetle, a battledor, to batter, batter, a kind of glutinous composition or food, made by beating different bodies into one mass. All these are of similar signification, and perhaps derived from the Latin batuo. Thus take, touch, tickle, tack, tackle; all imply a local conjunction from the Latin tango, tetigi, tactum.

From two are formed twain, twice, twenty, twelve, twins, twine, twig, twirl, twig, twitch, twinge, between, betwixt, twilight, twibil.

The following remarks extracted from Wallis, are ingenious, but of more subtlety than solidity, and such as perhaps might in every language be enlarged without end.

Sn usually imply the nose, and what relates to it. From the Latin nasus are derived the French nez and the English nose; and ness, a promontory, as projecting like a nose. But as if from the consonants ns taken from nasus, and transposed that they may the better correspond, sn denotes nasus; and thence are derived many words that relate to the nose, as snout, sneeze, snore, snort, sneer, snicker, snot, snivel, snite, snuff, snuffle, snaffle, snarle, smudge.

There is another sn which may perhaps be derived from the Latin sinus, as snake, sneak, snail, snare; so likewise snap and snatch, snib, snub.

Bl imply a blast; as blow, blast, to blast, to blight, and, metaphorically, to blast one's reputation; blast, a bleak place, to look bleak, or weather beaten, bleak, bley, bleach, bluster, blurt, blister, blab, bladder, bleb, blubberlipt, blubber-cheek'd, blotted, blote-burrings, blast, blaze, to blow, that is blossom, bloom; and perhaps blood and bluſh.

In the native words of our tongue is to be found a great agreement between the letters and the thing signified; and therefore the sounds of the letters smaller, sharper, louder, closer, softer, stronger, clearer, more obscure, and more stridulous, do very often intimate the like effects in the things signified.

Thus words that begin with str intimate the force and effect of the thing signified, as if probably derived from τορνυμι, or strenuus; as strong, strength, strew, strike, streak, strake, stripe, strive, strife, struggle, strout, strut, stretch, strait, strict, straight, that is, narrow, distrain, stress, distress, string, strop, stream, streamer, strand, strip, stray, struggle, strange, stride, straddle.

St in like manner imply strength, but in a less degree, so much only as is sufficient to preserve what has been already communicated, rather than acquire any new degree; as if it were derived from the Latin sto; for example, stand, stay, that is, to remain, or to prop; staff, stay, that is, to oppose; stop, to stuff, stiffe, to stey, that is, to stop; a stay, that is an obstacle: stick, stut, stutter, stammer, stagger, stickle, stick, stake, a sharp pale, and any thing deposited at play; stock, stem, sting, to sting, stink, stitch, stud, stanchion, stub, stubble, to stub up, stump whence stumble, stalk to stalk, step, to stamp with the feet, whence to stamp, that is, to make an impression and a stamp; stew, to stow, to bestow, steward, or stow-ard, stead, steady, stedfast, stable, a stable, a stall, stool, still, stallage, stage, still, adjective, and still adv. stale, stout, sturdy, stead, stout, stallion, stiff, forehead, to starve with hunger or cold; stone, steel, stern, stanch, to stanch blood, to stare, steep, steeple, stair, standard, a stated measure, stately. In all these, and perhaps some others, st denote something firm and fixed.

Thr imply a more violent degree of motion, as throw, thrust, throng, throb, through, threat, threaten, thrall, threws.

Wr imply some sort of obliquity or distortion, as wry, to wreath, wrest, wrestle, wring, wrong, wrinch, wrench, wrangle, wrinkle, wroth, wreak, wrack, wretch, wrist, wrap.

Sw imply a silent agitation, or softer kind of lateral motion; as sway, swag, to sway, swag- ger, ſcarce, ſcarce, ſcoop, ſcull, ſcum, ſcurf, ſcurvy, ſcuttle, ſcythe.

Nor is there much difference of ſm in ſmooth, ſmug, ſmile, ſmirk, ſmite, which ſignifies the ſame as to ſtrike, but is a ſofter word; ſmall, ſmell, ſmack, ſmother, ſmart, a ſmart blow properly ſignifies ſuch a kind of ſtroke, as with an originally ſilent motion implied in ſm, proceeds to a quick violence, denoted by ar ſuddenly ended, as is ſhewn by t.

Cl denote a kind of adheſion or tenacity, as in cleave, cley, cling, climb, clamber clammy, claſp, to claſp, to clip, to clitch, cleak, clog, cloſe, to cloſe, a clod, a clot, as a clot of blood, clouted cream, a clutter, a cluſter.

Sp imply a kind of diſſipation or expanſion, eſpecially a quick one, particularly if there be an r, as if it were from ſparge or ſeparo: for example, ſpread, ſpring, ſprig, ſprout, ſprinkle, ſplit, ſplinter, ſpill, ſpit, ſputter, ſpatter.

Sl denote a kind of ſilent fall, or a leſs obſervable motion; as in ſlime, ſlide, ſlip, ſlipper, ſly, ſleight, ſlit, ſlow, ſlack, ſlight, ſling, ſlap.

And ſo likewiſe aſh, in craſh, raſh, gaſh, flaſh, claſh, laſh, ſlaſh, plaſh, traſh, indicate ſomething acting more nimbly and ſharply. But uſh, in cruſh, ruſh, guſh, ſluſh, bluſh, bruſh, buſh, puſh, imply ſomething as acting more obtuſely and duſky. Yet in both there is indicated a ſwift and ſudden motion not inſtantaneous; but gradual, by the continued ſound ſh.

Thus in ſling, ſling, ding, ſwing, cling, ſing, wring, ſling, the tingling of the termination ng, and the ſharpneſs of the vowel i, imply the continuation of a very ſlender motion or tremour, at length indeed vaniſhing, but not ſuddenly interrupted. But in tink, wink, ſink, clink, chink, think, that end in a mute conſonant, there is alſo indicated a ſudden ending.

If there be an l, as in jingle, tingle, tinkle, mingle, ſprinkle, twinkle, there is implied a frequency, or iteration of ſmall acts. And the ſame frequency of acts, but leſs ſubtile by reaſon of the clearer vowel a, is indicated in jangle, tangle, ſpangle, mangle, wrangle, brangle, dangle; as alſo in mumble, grumble, jumble. But at the ſame time the cloſe u implies ſomething obſcure or obtunded; and a congeries of conſonants mbl, denotes a confuſed kind of rolling or tumbling, as in ramble, ſcamble, ſcramble, wamble, amble; but in theſe there is ſomething acute.

In nimble the acuteneſs of the vowel denotes celerity. In ſparkle, ſp denotes diſſipation, ar an acute crackling, k a ſudden interruption, l a frequent iteration; and in like manner in ſprinkle, unleſs in may imply the ſubtilty of the diſſipated guttules. Thick and thin differ in that the former ends with an obtuſe conſonant, and the latter with an acute.

In like manner, in ſquelch, ſqeak, ſqueal, ſquall, brawl, wraul, yaul, ſpaul, ſcreak, ſhrick, ſhrill, ſharp, ſhrivel, wrinkle, crack, croſh, claſh, gnaſh, plaſh, cruſh, buſh, biſſeh, ſiſſe, whiſk, ſoft, jar, hurl, curl, whirl, buz, buſtle, ſpindle, dwindle, twine, twiſt, and in many more, we may obſerve the agreement of ſuch ſort of ſounds with the things ſignified; and this ſo frequently happens, that ſcarce any language which I know can be compared with ours. So that one monoſyllable words of which kind are almoſt all ours, emphatically expreſſes what in other languages can ſcarce be explained but by compounds, or decompounds or ſometimes a tedious circumlocution.

We have many words borrowed from the Latin; but the greateſt part of them were communicated by the intervention of the French as, grace, face, elegant, elegance, reſemble.

Some verbs which ſeem borrowed from the Latin, are formed from the preſent tenſe, and ſome from the ſupines.

From the preſent are formed ſpend, compound expendo; conduce, conduco; deſpiſe, deſpicio; approve, approbo; conceive, concipio.

From the ſupines, ſupplicate, ſupplico; demonſtrate, demonſtro; diſpoſe, diſpono; expatiate, expatior; ſuppreſs, ſupprimo; exempt, eximo.

Nothing is more apparent, than that Wallis goes too far in queſt of originals. Many of theſe which ſeem ſelected as immediate deſcendants from the Latin, are apparently French, as, conceive, approve, expoſe, exempt.

Some words purely French, not derived from the Latin, we have transferred into our language; as, garden, garter, buckler, to advance, to cry, to plead, from the French jardin, jartiere, bouclier, avancer, cryer, plaider; though, indeed, even of theſe part is of Latin original.

As to many words which we have in common with the Germans, it is doubtful whether the old Teutons borrowed them from the Latins, or the Latins from the Teutons, or both had them from ſome common original; as wine, vinum; wind, ventus; went, veni; way, via; wall, vallum; wallow, volvo; wool, vellus, will, volo; worm, vermis; worth, virtus; waſp, veſpa; day, dies; draw, traho; tame, domo, δαμαω; yoke, jugum, ζυγος; over, upper, ſuper, υπερ; am, ſum, ειμι; break, frango; fly, volo; blow, flo. I make no doubt but the Teutonick is more ancient than the Latin: and it is no leſs certain, that the Latin, which borrowed a great number of words not only from the Greek, eſpecially the Æolick, but from other neighbouring languages, as the Oſcan and others, which have long become obſolete, received not a few from the Teutonick. It is certain, that the Engliſh, German, and other Teutonick languages, retained ſome derived from the Greek, which the Latin has not; as ax, achs, mit, ford, pfurd, daughter, tochter, mickle, mingle, moon, oar, grave, graff, to grave, to ſcrape, robole, from αξινη, μιξις, ωκεανος, θυγατηρ, μεγαλος, μιγνυω, μηνη, ἐρεσσω, γραφω, ολος. Since they received theſe immediately from the Greeks, without the intervention of the Latin language, why may not other words be deriand immediately from the same fountain, though they be likewise found among the Latin?

Our ancestors were studious to form borrowed words, however long into monosyllables; and not only cut off the formative termination, but cropped the first syllable, especially when beginning with a vowel; and rejected not any vowels in the middle, but likewise consonants of a weaker sound, retaining the larger, which seem the bones of words, or energy them for others of the same organ, in order that the sound might become the softer; but especially transposing their order, that they might be more readily be pronounced without the intermediate vowels. For example in expende, spend; exemplum, sample; excipio, scape; extraneous, strange; extractum, stretch'd; extricio, to screw; exfolio, to scour; excorio, to scourge; excortico, to scratch; and others beginning with ex: as, also emendo, to mend; episcopus, bishop; in Danish bisp; epistola, pistle, hospitale, spittle; Hispania, Spain; historia, story.

Many of these etymologies are doubtful, and some evidently mistaken.

The following are somewhat harder, Alexander, Scander; Elizabetha, Betty; apis, bee, apes, bees. p, passing into b, as in bishop; and by cutting off a from the beginning, which is restored into the middle; but for the old bar or bare, we now say boar; as for lang, long; for bain, bane, for stane, stone, aprugna, brown, p being changed into b and u transposed, as in aper, and g changed into w as in pignus, pawn; lege, law; alopex, fox, cutting off the beginning and changing p into f, as in pellis, a fell; pullus, a foal; pater, father; pavor, fear; polio, file; pleo, impleo, fill, full; piscis, fish; and transposing e into the middle, which was taken from the beginning; apex, a piece; peak, pike; zopissa, sweize; mustum, stum; defensio, fence; dispensator, spenser; asculto, escouter, Fr. scout; excalpo, scrape, restoring l instead of r, and hence scrap, scrable, scrawl; exculpo, scoop; externus, stert; extonitus, attonitus, stoun'd, Enneachus, nave: offendo, fined; obstipo, stop; audere, dare; cavere, ware, whence a-ware, be-ware, wary, warn, warning; for the Latin v consonant formerly sounded like our w, and the modern sound of the v consonant was formerly that of the letter f, that is, the Æolick digamma, which had the sound of φ, and the modern sound of the letter f was that of the Greek φ or ph; ulcus, ulcere, ulser, sore; and hence, sorry, sorrow, sorrowful; ingenium, engine, gin; scalenus, leaning, unless you would rather derive it from κλινω, whence inclino; infundibulum, funnel, gagates, jett; projectum, to throw; a jetty; cucullus, a cowl.

There are syncopes somewhat harder; from tempore, time; from nomine, name, domina, dame; as the French homme, femme, nom, from homine, femina, nomine. Thus pagina, page; πους, foot; κατ-ακλα-ω, cub; cantharus, can; tentorium, tent; precor, pray; præda, prey; specio, speculor, spy; plico, ply; implico, imply, replico, reply; complico, comply; sedes episcopalis, see.

A vowel is also cut off in the middle, that the number of the syllables may be lessened; as, amita, aunt; Spiritus, spright; debitum, debt; dubito, doubt; comes, comitis, count; clericus, clerk; quietus, quit, quite; acquieto, to acquit; separo, to spare; stabilis, stable; stabulum, stable; pallacium, palace, place; rabula, rail, rawl, wraul, brawl, rable, brable; quæsitor, quest.

As also a consonant, or at least one of a softer sound or even a whole syllable, rotundus, round; fragilis, frail; securus, sure; regula, rule; tegula, tile; subtilis, subtle; nomen, noun; decanus, dean; computo, count; subitaneus, sudden, soon; superare, to soar; periculum, peril; mirabile, marvel; as magnus, main; dignor, deign; tingo, stain; tinctum, taint; pingo, paint; prædari, reach.

The contraction may seem harder where many of them meet, as κυριακος, kyrk, church; presbyter, priest; sacristanus, sexton; frango, fregi, break, breach; agus, φαγω; beech, f changed into b, and g into ch, which are letters near a-kin; frigesco, freeze, frigesco, fresh; sc into sh, as above in bishop, fish, so in schapha, skiff, ship, and refrigesco, refresh; but viresco, fresh; phlebotamus, fleam; bovina, beef; vitulina, veal; scutifer, squire; pœnitentia, penance; sanctuarium, sanctuary, sentry, quæsitio, chase; perquisitio, purchase; anguilla, eel; insula, isle, ile, island, iland; insuletta, islet, ilet, eyght, and more contractedly ey, whence, Orkney, Ruley, Eley; examinare, to scan; namely, by rejecting from the beginning and end e and o, according to the usual manner, the remainder namin, which the Saxons, who did not use x, writ escamen, or scaman, is contracted into scan; as from dominus, don; nomine, noun; abomino, ban; and indeed apum, examen, they turned, into sciame; for which we say swarme, by inserting r to denote the murmuring; the saurus, store; sedile, stool; wros, wet; sudo, sweat; gaudium, gay; jocus, joy; succus, juice, catena, chain; caligula, calga, chause, chausse, Fr. bose; extinguo, stanch, squench, quench, stint; foras, forth; species, spice; recito, read; adjuvo, aid; ævum, ævum, ay, age, ever; floccus, lock; excerpo, scrape, scrabble, scrawl; extravagus, stray, straggle; collectum, clot, clutch; colligo, coil; recolligo; recoil; severo, swear; stridulus, shrill; procurator, proxy; pulso, to push; calamus, a quill; impetere, to impeach; augeo, auxi, wax; and vanesco, vanui, wane; syllabare, to spell; puteus, pit; granum, corn; comprimo, cramp, crump, crumple, crinkle.

Some may seem harsher, yet may not be rejected, for it at last appears, that some of them are derived from proper names, and there are others whose etymology is acknowledged by every body: as, Alexander, Elick, Scander, Sander, Sandy, Sanny; Elizabetha, Elizabeth,

Eliſabeth, Betty, Beſs; Margareta, Margaret, Margot, Meg, Peg; Maria, Mary, Mal, Pal, Malkin, Mawkin, Mawkes; Mathæus, Mattha, Matthew; Martha, Mat, Pat; Gulielmus, Wilhelmus, Girolamo, Guillaume, William, Will, Bill, Wilkin, Wicken, Wicks, Weeks.

Thus cariophyllus, flos; gerofilo, Ital. girifflee, giloſer, Fr. gilliflower, which the vulgar call julyflower, as if derived from the month July; petroſelinum, parſley; portulaca, purſlain; cydonium, quince; cydoniatum, quiddeny; perſicum, peach; eruca, eruke, which they corrupt to ear-wig, as if it took its name from the ear; annulus geminus, a gimmal and jumbal-ring is transferred to other things thus interwoven; quelques choſes, kickſhaws. Since the origin of theſe, and many others, however forced is evident, it ought to appear no wonder to any one if the ancients have thus disfigured many, eſpecially as they ſo much affected monoſyllables; and to make the ſound the ſofter, took this liberty of maiming, taking away, changing, tranſpoſing, and ſoftening them.

But while we derive theſe from the Latin, I do not mean to ſay, that many of them did not immediately come to us from the Saxon, Daniſh, Dutch, and Teutonick languages, and other dialects, and ſome taken more lately from the French or Italians, or Spaniards.

The ſame word, according to its different ſignifications, often has a different origin; as, to bear a burden, from fero; but to bear, whence birth, born, beirn, come from pario; and a bear, at leaſt if it be of Latin original, from fero. Thus perch, a fiſh, from perca; but perch, a meaſure, from pertica, and likewiſe to perch. To ſpell is from ſyllaba: but ſpell, an inchantment, by which it is believed, that the boundaries are ſo fixed in lands that none can paſs them againſt the maſter's will, from expello; and ſpell, a meſſenger, from, epiſtola; whence goſpel, good-ſpell, or god-ſpell. Thus freeſe, or freeze, from frigeſco; but freeze, an architectonick word, from zophorus; but freeſe, for cloth, from Friſia, or perhaps from frigeſco, as being more fit than any other for keeping out the cold.

There are many words among us, even monoſyllables, compounded of two or more words, at leaſt ſerving inſtead of compounds, and compriſing the ſignification of more words than one; as from ſcrip and roll comes ſcroll; from proud and dunce, prance; from ſt of the verb ſtay or ſtand and out, is made ſtout; from ſtout and hardy, ſturdy; from ſp of ſpit or ſpew, and out, comes ſpout; from the ſame ſp with the termination in, is ſpin; and adding out, ſpin out: and from the ſame ſp, with it, is ſpit, which only differs from ſpout in that it is ſmall, and with leſs noiſe and force; but ſputter is, becauſe of the obſcure u, ſomething between ſpit and ſpout: and by reaſon of adding r, it intimates a frequent iteration and noiſe, but obſcurely confuſed; whereas ſpatter, on account of the ſharper and clearer vowel a, intimates a more diſtinct noiſe, in which it chiefly differs from ſputter. From the ſame ſp, and the termination ark, comes ſpark, ſignifiying a ſingle emiſſion of fire with a noiſe; namely, ſp, emiſſion, ar the more acute noiſe, and k, mute conſonant, intimates its being ſuddenly terminated; but adding l, is made the frequentative ſparkle. The ſame ſp, by adding r, the ſpr, implies a more lively impetus of diffuſing, expanding itſelf; to which adding the termination ing, it becomes ſpring: its vigour ſpr ports, its ſharpneſs the termination ing, laſtly in acute and tremulous ends in the n conſonant g, denotes the ſudden ending of motion, that it is meant in its primary ſign cation, of a ſingle, not a complicated exiliti Hence we call ſpring whatever has an elaſ force; as alſo a fountain of water, and the the origin of any thing: and to ſpring, to g minate, and ſpring, one of the four ſeaſo From the ſame ſpr and out, is formed ſpre and with the termination ig, ſprig; of whi the following, for the moſt part, is the diffe ence: ſprout, of a groſſer ſound, imports a ſi ter or groſſer bud; ſprig, of a ſlenderer foun denotes a ſmaller ſhoot. In like manne from str of the verb ſtrive, and out, comes ſtrou and ſtrut. From the ſame str, and the termi nation uggle is made struggle; and this gl import but without any great noiſe, by reaſon t the obſcure ſound of the vowel u. In like man ner, from throw and roll is made trull; and a moſt in the ſame is trundle, from throt or thruſt, and rundle. Thus graff and grough compounded of grove and rough; and trudg from tread or trot and drudge.

In theſe obſervations it is eaſy to diſcove great ſagacity and great extravagance, as ability to do much defeated by the deſire of doing more than enough. It may be remarked,

1. That Wallis's derivations are often ſo made, that by the ſame licence any language may be deduced from any other.

2. That he makes no diſtinction between words immediately derived by us from the Latin, and thoſe which being copied from other languages, can therefore afford no example of the genius of the Engliſh language, or its laws of derivation.

3. That he derives from the Latin, often with great harſhneſs and violence, words apparently Teutonick; and therefore, according to his own declaration, probably older than the tongue to which he refers them.

4. That ſome of his derivations are apparently erroneous.

SYNTAX.

The eſtabliſhed practice of grammarians requires that I ſhould here treat of the Syntax; but our language has ſo little inflection or variety of terminations, that its conſtruction neither requires nor admits many rules. Wallis, therefore, has totally neglected it; and Jonſon, whoſe desire of following the writers upon the learned languages made him think a syntax indispensably necessary, has published such petty observations as were better omitted.

The verb, as in other languages, agrees with the nominative in number and person; as, Thou fall from good: he runs to death.

Our adjectives and pronouns are invariable.

Of two substantives the noun possessive is in the genitive; as, His father's glory; The sun's beat.

Verbs transitive require an oblique case: as, He loves me; You fear him.

All prepositions require an oblique case: as, He gave this to me; He took this from me; He stay'd with me.

PROSODY.

It is common for those that deliver the grammar of modern languages, to omit the Prosody. Father of the Italians is neglected by Buomattei; that of the French by Desmarais; and that of the English by Wallis, Cooper, and even by Jonson, though a poet. But as the laws of metre are included in the idea of grammar, I have thought proper to insert them.

Prosody comprises orthoepy, or the rules of pronunciation; and orthometry, or the laws of versification.

PRONUNCIATION is just, when every letter has its proper sound, and when every syllable has its proper accent, or, which in English versification is the same, its proper quantity.

The sounds of the letters have been already explained; and rules for the accent or quantity are not easily to be given, being subject to innumerable exceptions. Such however as I have read or formed, I shall here propose.

1. Of dissyllables, formed by affixing a termination, the former syllable is commonly accented, as childish, kingdom, actest, acted, toilsome, lovely, sister, suitor, foremost, zealous, sulness, godly, manly, artist.

2. Dissyllables formed by prefixing a syllable to the radical word have commonly the accent on the latter; as, to begét, to beseém, to bedéw.

3. Of dissyllables, which are at once nouns and verbs, the verb has commonly the accent on the latter, and the noun on the former syllable; as, to descánt, a descant; to cement, a cément; a contráct, to contract.

This rule has many exceptions. Though verbs seldom have their accent on the former, yet nouns have it often on the latter syllable; as delight, perfume.

4. All dissyllables ending in y, as crány; in ow, as fallow, sorrow; in ow, as, willow, hollow, except allow; in le, as battle, bible; in ish, as banish; in ck, as cambrick, casseck; in ter, as to batter; in age, as courage; in en, as fasten; in et, as quiet; accent the former syllable.

5. Dissyllable nouns; in er, as canker, butter, have the accent on the former syllable.

6. Dissyllable verbs terminating in a consonant and e final, as comprise, escape; or having a diphthong in the last syllable, as appease, reveal; or ending in two consonants, as attend; have the accents on the latter syllable.

7. Dissyllable nouns having a diphthong in the latter syllable, have commonly their accent on the latter syllable, as applause; except words in ain, certain, mountain.

8. Trissyllables formed by adding a termination, or prefixing a syllable, retain the accent of the radical word; as, lovelíness, tenderness, contémner, wágoner, physical, bespátter, commending, commending, assúrance.

9. Trissyllables ending in ous, as gracious, árduous; in al, as cápital; in ion, as ménsion; accent the first.

10. Trissyllables ending in ce, ent, and ate, accent the first syllable, as countenance, continence, ornament, imminent, élegant, propagate, except they be derived from words having the accent on the last, as contrivance, acquaintance; or the middle syllable hath a vowel before two consonants, as promúlgate.

11. Trissyllables ending in y, as entity, specify, liberty, victory, subsidy, commonly accent the first syllable.

12. Trissyllables in re or le accent the first syllable, as, légible, théatre, except disciple, and some words which have a position, as example, epistle.

13. Trissyllables in ude commonly accent the first syllable, as plénitude.

14. Trissyllables ending in ator or atour, as creátour, or having in the middle syllable a diphthong, as endéavour; or a vowel before two consonants, as domestick; accent the middle syllable.

15. Trissyllables that have their accent on the last syllable are commonly French, as acquiésce, repartée, magazine, or words formed by prefixing one or two syllables to an acute syllable, as immatúre, overchárge.

16. Polysyllables, or words of more than three syllables, follow the accent of the words from which they are derived. as árrogating, cóntinency, incóntinently, commendable, communicableness. We should therefore say dispútable, indispútable, rather than disputable, indisputable; and advertísement, rather than advértisement.

17. Words in ion have the accent upon the antepenult, as, salvátion, perturbátion, concóction; words in atour or ator on the penult, as dedicátor.

18. Words ending in le commonly have the accent on the first syllable, as amicable, unless the second syllable have a vowel before two consonants, as combústible.

19. Words ending in ous have the accents on the antepenult, as uxórious, voluptuous.

20. Words ending in ty have their accent on the antepenult, as pusillanimity, activity.

These rules are not advanced as complete or infallible, but proposed as useful. Almost every rule of every language has its exceptions; and in English, as in other tongues, much must be learned by example and authority. Perhaps more and better rules may be given that have escaped my observation.

VERSIFICATION is the arrangement of a certain number of syllables according to certain laws.

The feet of our verses are either iambick, as alóft, create; or trochaick, as hóly, lófty.

Our iambick measure comprises verses

Of four syllables,

Most good, most fair,
Or things as rare,
To call you's loft;
For all the coft
Words can beftow,
So poorly fhow
Upon your praife,
That all the ways
Senfe hath, comes fhort. Drayton.

With raviſh'd ears
The monarch hears. Dryden.

Of ſix,

This while we are abroad,
Shall we not touch our lyre?
Shall we not ſing an ode;
Or ſhall that holy fire,
In us that ſtrongly glow'd,
In this cold air expire?

Though in the utmoſt peak,
A while we do remain,
Amongſt the mountains bleak,
Expos'd to ſleet and rain,
No ſport our hours ſhall break,
To exerciſe our vein.

What though bright Phœbus' beams
Refreſh the ſouthern ground,
And though the princely Thames
With beauteous nymphs abound,
And by old Camber's ſtreams
Be many wonders found:

Yet many rivers clear
Here glide in ſilver ſwathes,
And what of all moſt dear,
Buxton's delicious baths.
Strong ale and noble chear,
T' aſſwage breem winter's ſcathes.

In places far or near,
Or famous, or obſcure,
Where wholſom is the air,
Or where the moſt impure,
All times, and every where,
The muſe is ſtill in ure. Drayton.

Of eight, which is the uſual meaſure for ſhort poems,

And may at laſt my weary age
Find out the peaceful hermitage,
The hairy gown, and moſſy cell,
Where I may ſit, and nightly ſpell
Of ev'ry ſtar the ſky doth ſhew,
And ev'ry herb that ſips the dew.
M

Often, which is the common meaſure of roick and tragick poetry,

Full in the midſt of this created ſpace,
Betwixt heav'n, earth, and ſkies there ſtan place
Confining on all three; with triple bound
Whence all things, though remote are view' around,
And thither bring their undulating ſound.
The palace of loud Fame, her ſeat of pow'r,
Plac'd on the ſummit of a lofty tow'r;
A thouſand winding entries long and wide
Receive of freſh reports a flowing tide.
A thouſand crannies in the walls are made
Nor gate nor bars exclude the buſy trade.
'Tis built of braſs, the better to diffuſe
The ſpreading ſounds, and multiply the nev
Where echoes in repeated echoes play:
A mart for ever full; and open night and d
Nor ſilence is within, nor voice expreſs,
But a deaf noiſe of ſounds that never ceaſe;
Confuſ'd, and chiding like the hollow rore
Of tides, receding from th' infulted ſhore;
Or like the broken thunder heard from far,
When Jove to diſtance drives the rolling war
The courts are fill'd with a tumultuous din
Of crouds, or iſſuing forth or ent'ring in:
A thorough-fare of news; where ſome deviſ
Things never heard, ſome mingle truth wi lies;
The troubled air with empty ſounds they bea
Intent to hear, and eager to repeat.
Dryde

In all theſe meaſures the accents are to b placed on even ſyllables; and every line con ſidered by itſelf is more harmonious, as thi rule is more ſtrictly obſerved. The variation neceſſary to pleaſure belong to the art of poe try, not the rules of grammar.

Our trochaick meaſures are

Of three ſyllables.

Here we may'
Think and pray,
Before death
Stops our breath:
Other joys,
Are but toys. Walton's Angler.

Of five.

In the days of old,
Stories plainly told,
Lover's felt annoy. Old Ballad.

Of ſeven.

Faireſt piece of well form'd earth,
Urge not thus your haughty birth.
Waller.

In these measures the accent is to be placed on the odd syllables.

These are the measures which are now in use, and above the rest those of seven, eight, and ten syllables. Our ancient poets wrote verse sometimes of twelve syllables, as Drayton's Polyolbion,

Of all the Cambrian shires their heads that bear so high,
And earth'ly survey their soils with an ambitious eye.
Mervina for her hills, as for their matchless crowds,
The neareſt that are said to kiss the wand'ring clouds,
Especial audience craves offended with the throng,
That she of all the rest neglected was so long;
Alleging for herself, when through the Saxon's pride,
The godlike race of Brute to Severn's setting side,
Were cruelly inforc'd, her mountains did relieve
Those whom devouring war else ev'ry where did grieve,
And when all Wales beside (by fortune or by might)
Unto her ancient foe resign'd her ancient right,
A constant maiden still she only did remain,
The last her genuine laws which stoutly did retain,
And as each one is prais'd for her peculiar things;
So only she is rich, in mountains, meres, and springs,
And holds herself as great in her superfluous wake,
As others by their towns, and fruitful tillage grac'd.

And of fourteen, as Chapman's Homer.

And as the mind of such a man, that hath a long way gone,
And evil knoweth not his way, or else would let alone
His purpos'd journey, is distract.

The measures of twelve and fourteen syllables were often mingled by our old poets, sometimes in alternate lines, and sometimes in alternate couplets.

The verse of twelve syllables, called an Alexandrine, is now only used to diversify heroick lines.

Waller was smooth, but Dryden taught to join
The varying verse, the full resounding line,
The long majestick march, and energy divine. Pope.

The pause in the Alexandrine must be at the sixth syllable.

The verse of fourteen syllables is now broken into a soft lyrick measure of verses, consisting alternately of eight syllables and six.

She to receive thy radiant flame,
Selects a whiter space. Fenton.

When all shall praise, and ev'ry lay
Devote a wreath to thee,
That day, for come it will, that day
Shall I lament to see. Lewis to Pope.

Beneath this tomb an infant lies
To earth whose body lent,
Hereafter shall more glorious rise,
But not more innocent.
When the Archangel's trump shall blow,
And souls to bodies join,
What crowds shall wish their lives below
Had been as short as thine. Wesley.

We have another measure very quick and lively, and therefore much used in songs, which may be called the anapestick, in which the accent rests upon every third syllable.

May I govern my passions with absolute sway.
And grow wiser and better as life wears away.
Dr. Pope.

In this measure a syllable is often retrenched from the first foot, as Diogenes surly and proud. Dr. Pope.

When present, we love, and when absent agree,
I think not of Iris nor Iris of me. Dryden.

These measures are varied by many combinations, and sometimes by double endings, either with or without rhyme, as in the heroic measure.

'Tis the divinity that stirs within us,
'Tis heaven itself that points out an hereafter,
And intimates eternity to man. Addison.

So in that of eight syllables,

They neither added nor confounded,
They neither wanted nor abounded. Prior.

In that of seven,

For resistance I could fear none,
But with twenty ships had done,
What thou, brave and happy Vernon,
Hast atchiev'd with six alone. Glover.

In that of six,

'Twas when the seas were roaring,
With hollow blasts of wind,

Digitized by Google

A damsel lay deploring,
All on a rock reclined.

In the anapestick,

When terrible tempests assail us,
And mountainous billows affright;
Nor power nor wealth can avail us,
But skilful industry steers right. Ballad.

To these measures and their laws, may be reduced every species of English verse.

Our versification admits of few licences, except a synalepha, or elision, or elision of e in the before a vowel, as th' eternal; and more r of e in to, as t'accept; and a synæresis, by w two short vowels coalesce into one syllabl gueſtion, ſpecial; or a word is contracted by expulsion of a short vowel before a liqui inv'rick, temp'rance.

Thus have I collected rules and examples which the English language may be learn if the reader be already acquainted with gra matical terms, or taught by a master to th that are more ignorant. To have writte grammar for such as are not yet initiated in schools, would have been tedious, and perh at last ineffectual.

AMMONIAC. s.

GUM AMMONIAC is brought from the East Indies, and is supposed to ooze from an umbelliferous plant.

SAL AMMONIAC is a volatile salt of two kinds. The ancient was a native salt, generated in inns where pilgrims, coming from the temple of Jupiter Ammon, used to lodge; who travelling upon camels, urining in the stables, out of this urine arose a kind of salt, denominated Ammoniac. The modern sal ammoniac is entirely factitious, and made in Egypt, with soot, a little sea salt, and the urine of cattle. Our chymists imitate the Egyptian sal ammoniac, by adding one part of common salt to five of urine; with which same mix that quantity of soot.
